

THE DAILY REBEL.

Office on Market Street, over the Bank of Tennessee.

CHATTANOOGA:

TUESDAY MORNING, JAN. 20, 1863.

THE SITUATION.

The object of the expedition of General Wheeler, to Harpeth Shoals, as we predicted, in our situation article of Sunday morning, was the destruction of the enemy's transports at that point, and we are gratified to be able to announce to-day that it has been eminently successful. Official information was received in this city on Saturday night, that General Wheeler had captured four transports and four hundred prisoners, besides capturing a gun-boat which was pursuing our cavalry. The gun-boat and three of the transports, together with their cargoes, consisting of valuable supplies for Rosecrans' army were burned. The remaining boat, after the destruction of its cargo, was bonded by General Wheeler, and appropriated for the transportation of the four hundred prisoners who were immediately paroled and sent back to Yankeeedom. The expedition and its results present one of the most brilliant achievements of the famed mounted men of the West and adds another bright leaf to the laureled brow of the dashing young Georgin General.

The redoubtable Dick McCANN, whilom of California and Mexican fame, a dashing Partisan Chief from the city of Rocks, also made a dash of late nights since to within three miles of Nashville, and destroyed a railroad bridge. It is said, that Captain McCANN, actually used the rails from the fences around his own property near Nashville, to build the fire. The Yankees, have since destroyed his property by way of retaliation.

Our army still occupies about the same position, and it is believed the enemy is likewise in statu quo. General Cheatham, at Shelbyville, now in Lt. General Polk's absence, commands the left corps of the army. General Wharton with a cavalry force is operating along our immediate front, and Buford on the Manchester pike. We are informed that the enemy's outposts extend a mile or six miles out the road leading to Shelbyville from Murfreesboro', and the main army of Rosecrans is camped around the latter place. The headquarters of the Federal commander are at the residence of the Hon Charles Ready.

A rumor was in circulation here yesterday, to the effect that the Federals were collecting a heavy force, with gunboats and transports, at Corinth, Miss., preparatory to an advance up the Tennessee, for the purpose of flanking our army in Middle Tennessee. We do not give credence to this report, believing such a movement utterly impossible at this season, with heavy wagon trains and artillery. Besides, if the Tennessee is sufficiently high for navigation as far up as Florence, the Duck and Elk Rivers will also be swollen to such an extent, as to oppose no inconsiderable obstacle to the advance of the Yankee army toward the Southwest.

The impression appears to gain ground in North Carolina, that the enemy are about moving in force from Beaufort and Newbern. They have a large armed and transport fleet at the first named point, together with some two iron-clads; they have also a heavy land force at Morehead City and Newbern.

The dispatches this morning announce another raid into Greenbrier, Va., by the Yankees, where they committed a number of depredations.

It is also reported, that the Yankees are again making preparations to attempt the passage of the Rappahannock, and there are indications of a renewal of hostilities near Fredericksburg. It is not improbable, however, that these movements are made to cover operations in North Carolina.

Nothing additional from Vicksburg. The Federal land force now in Louisiana is estimated at 26,000—18,000 at Baton Rouge and 8,000 at New Orleans.

The depredations committed in Middle Tennessee are truly deplorable, and should receive the immediate and earnest attention of Congress. We may as well begin now as later to resist, punish and suppress the barbarous mode of warfare being adopted by Rosecrans and his officers. If we do not there is no knowing to what extent it may reach, what suffering it may cause, what consequences it may bring. The Confederate Government should evince by its action not only that it understood how to redress the grievances of its people, but also that its power is equal to its will. We should also signalize to the people of Middle Tennessee an ever-mindful care of their interests, and an ever-appreciative recognition of their loyalty, services and self-sacrificing spirit. No body of citizens have contributed more to the common whole; no class of men have exhibited a readier or larger share of spirit, courage enterprise; no region has suffered more, nor been so much neglected. The country round and round is coming to see and admit these facts, and it is high while that some rigorous official steps be taken in regard to the illicit acts of the enemy over that ill-fated region.

The Northern papers republish a letter "from the rebel naval officer M. F. Maury, to the London Times," which states several important facts in a particularly clear and lucidly arranged style. The Commander begins by challenging history for a lunacy equal to that of the Northern people. The record of the Administration at Washington is one continued floundering through intrigue and stultification. The great bugbear of the Yankees is foreign intervention. To stave this off all sorts of shifts are resorted to, and all sorts of make-believes adopted. It has even been alleged that certain parties of influence in the South favor a reunion. This the Commander pronounces utterly false. The South is entirely united, not against a "constitutional government," but against a mere "mob" headed by Lincoln. Of the food, arms and supplies of the Southern army, Commander Maury speaks at length. He says: "I have heard since leaving the South a great deal said about our want of arms, about the half-starved and worse clad soldiers of the South. There is no lack of food among us. As for arms, we have taken enough from the enemy to equip all the force that we require; and then as to clothing, it is enough for me to say that the Customhouse receipts at Charleston for the month of July, 1862, were greater than they have been for the corresponding month of any year of the last ten; and this revenue was derived chiefly from duties on clothing and munitions of war, notwithstanding the famous blockade. A considerable amount of importations has also entered Wilmington, Mobile and the ports of Texas. Besides this, large quantities of clothing have been brought across the Potomac and the Chesapeake into the numerous rivers and creeks of Virginia, also from Ohio and other producing States of the West."

The most intense sympathy is expressed by the Northern people for Mexico, beautiful, persecuted Mexico—Mexico, the lovely land of the Montezumas! It is affecting to read the woful pictures which are drawn of burning haciendas, weeping signoritas, sacked convents, and idols overturned, cast down and trodden under foot, to say nothing of the enormous rise of silver, and destruction of guardiente. It is a personal war, say the Northern people, and therefore doubly damned. Napoleon hates Juarez, and wishes to depose him; hence the French raid. The Emperor gets his share of contumely; "tyrant," "oppressor," "subjugator." All this is truly refreshing. It amuses as while it teaches its own lesson. That lesson contains something about people who live in glass houses not throwing stones; with the additional fable of the fox and the lamb. The fox spied the lamb in great danger of being picked up by a hawk, and commiserated the poor little animal so heartily that it crept out of the fold to the protection which the fox offered. But no sooner were the walls removed between Reynard and the bleating simpleton than he fell to and devoured it. The "representatives of the Republic of Mexico," and especially that astute diplomat, Don Felix Romero, (of Oajaca) had best keep their wits about their ears and their hands upon their pockets. There is such a strangle as the wolf appearing in sheep's clothing; and the sympathy which a nation engaged in a war of rapine and extermination, for human freedom and the rights of man, is to be questioned, if not discredited.

"Abraham"—to the Jews—rescinding Grant's order expelling them from the Yankee army—
"To yer tents, oh! Israel!"
